"War....what is it good for?.. Absolutely nothing" proclaimed the lyrics of Edwin Starr's song. Most people, especially those who have experienced war, may well agree. To some war is good for profit. To others war leads to extreme loss. There is always a cost to war. This series explores the real cost of war, in all its forms. As you watch news of battles around the globe, have you ever wondered how it's all paid for? How do the guns end up in the hands of terrorists or "good guys"? Where do the weapons come from? How much does all this really cost? What is the human cost? What is the cost of displaced people and shattered lives? What is the cost of the wounded and permanently disabled? What is the cost to and of the veterans? The shell shocked survivors with PTSD? The physically wounded, disabled men and women who need support for the rest of their lives. The Economic cost - The Human cost - The Social Cost - The Environmental Cost - The Individual Cost - These are the themes we will explore and questions we will answer in this series THE COST OF WAR.

CULT OF PERSONALITY reveals new information about the shocking lives of the notorious cult leaders who are still manipulating and pulling the strings from behind prison walls and even from the grave. Our fascinating series digs into the psyche of each of these destructive cults, their personal history's, their initial motivation and inspiration and final evolution into cult status. Before Jim Jones was the notorious leader of a death cult, he fought for social and civil rights. David Koresh, Charles Manson, Warren Jeffs, Jim Jones, Marshall Applewhite, their names alone evoke a mix of fear and fascination. These are the charismatic and cruel leaders who all shared a common messianic complex, appetite for violence, and the ability to make those around them succumb to their wishes at any cost - including kidnapping, death and murder.

Modern cultures owe a great deal to the ancient civilizations that developed over millions of years of human evolution. We draw much more from their legacy than we generally realize. The Inca, Mesopotamian, Persian, Greek, Chinese, Egyptian, Roman, and Indus civilizations all still exert deep influences. In this series we will explore how, and to what extent these ancient Civilizations have contributed to our world. Architecture, Science, Society, Communication, Agriculture, Art & Culture, Exploration and The Art of War are the themes. What remains of these ancient civilizations? What still persists today? What did our predecessors invent, create or build in terms of science, communication, economics, politics and social relations? What have been the universal influences that came from different cultures and civilizations? We will discover these influences, and explore how they are still at work today in modern cultures all over the world. This compelling series will dig deep, exploring discoveries that changed the course of history, and are still very much in use in contemporary society.
